Information about Ireland

A small island off the north-western coast of Europe, Ireland has a mild, temperate climate, influenced greatly by the warmth of the Gulf stream.

Most visitors are amazed at the sheer variety of Ireland's scenery. Rolling hills, green pastures and rugged mountains contrast with towering sea cliffs, deep valleys and mysterious lakes - these features acting as a backdrop to the ever-changing character of the weather.

Travelling to Ireland

Ireland is linked to Britain by a selection of ferry routes, served by large, modern vessels, all with drive-on/drive-off facilities. Similar ferry routes to and from France connect Ireland directly to Continental Europe.

Getting to Ireland by sea or by air is easy. International airports are located at Dublin on the east coast, Cork in the south and Shannon in the West. There are regular flights from most major British cities, with almost hourly flights from London. Direct flights operate from most European capitals, with average flying times being about two hours.

Most students visiting this country stay with Irish host families. This gives a perfect opportunity to integrate fully into Irish life, while enjoying the friendliness, warmth and sincerity for which Ireland is renowned. The informal atmosphere of family life also helps greatly in absorbing the language in every day situations.

Students are placed with host families in safe residential areas. Generally student guests are treated as one of the family and are included in family outings and social occasions.

All host families are carefully selected, individually inspected and continually monitored.
